As lights come up, a father sits in an easy chair, reading a newspaper. After a moment of silence, chaos erupts with three children bursting in from side doors, commencing to play tag loudly. One tags the other and calls, "You're it!" The running continues. Through it all, father continues to read until two being chased close in and grab hold of his chair. They both turn to the chaser and call out, "Allie allie oxen, home free!" At this point, the father smiles, gathers them in his arms

Father: You're safe here!

At that point, lights go out. As lights come back up, the chair is turned with its back to the audience. Someone sits in it, but their identity is not known, nor do they move. Standing around on the platform are signs reading "Government", "Family", "Occupation", "Wealth", "Love", "Fame", and "Religion". In absolute silence, if possible, a "saint" slides in the back door of church, looking behind them. Pursuing the saint come three "demons," dressed all in black. They wear sandwich placard signs reading, "Despair", "Meaningless Life", and "Failure". In slow motion, they pursue the saint as he or she moves through the church, always barely eluding them. As the saint reaches each sign, he or she clings to it as though it represents salvation. Then they must abandon it in order so as not to not caught as the demons move in and knock the sign over. When all of signs are down, the saint leaps forward and grabs hold of the chair. Immediately, a voice booms out,

Jesus: Touch not mine anointed!

The chair slowly turns to reveal Jesus Christ sitting in it. As demons slowly back away, he smiles, puts his arm around the saint.

Jesus: You're safe here!

The lights fade away .
